Key components of institutional arrangements

These vary among countries depending on the national circumstances, priorities for action and demands for informing stakeholders involved in the implementation of action and reporting.

Institutional arrangements can be organized around five separate components

Importance of the Institutional Arrangements

- Institutional arrangements are policies, systems, processes and structures used by organizations to legislate, plan and manage their activities efficiently and to effectively coordinate with others in fulfilling their mandates.

- The process of data gathering and analysis for reporting to the UNFCCC involves many sources and compiling information from different levels of government such as ministries, sub-national government and other agencies, especially statistical services.

- Thus, climate reporting can provide an opportunity to engage stakeholders and inform them about the main climate issues of interest to each stakeholder group, with the objective of enhancing their climate awareness and triggering their support for climate action.

Importance of the Institutional Arrangements

The institutionalization of activities relating to reporting on climate change can be achieved through formally establishing a national institutional arrangement that functions on a continuous basis and underpin national capacity to facilitate the coordination of all activities in the preparation and submission of high-quality NCs and s /BTRs.

An institutional arrangement for national climate reporting is a set of organizational structures and procedures that are established to coordinate and oversee the preparation and submission of NCs and BTRs to UNFCCC. The institutional arrangement should ensure that the NC/BTR are prepared and submitted promptly, accurately, and consistently. Developing a robust institutional framework that encompasses the relevant institutional entities as well as the necessary staff, systems, and processes, is essential for effective reporting.

Importance of the Institutional Arrangements

The volume and diversity of information to be included for the preparation of NCs and/ or BTRs, it is necessary
